The arts shape Wyoming's character. WPM will join our colleagues from Wyoming's arts and culture communities for a legislative reception. Our collective goal is to demonstrate the value of arts and culture in forming Wyoming's economic backbone and character. Staff will be on hand to tell our stories to legislators and visitors. Be sure to remind your legislators to drop in to the reception at Little America February 11, from 6 to 9 p.m.

Wyoming legislative reporting takes place from February 10th to March 12th. WPM will provide 2 to 5 newscast spots a day, as well as interviews and features. A complete list of recorded content will be available on our website at the Wyoming Legislative Coverage site.

The State of the Union Address will be aired live on February 4th, (watch online at wyomingpublicmedia.org). The State of the State will be delivered on February 10, aired live and available on the Wyoming Legislative Coverage site.

As a reminder, WPM is carrying the Senate impeachment hearings. For listeners who prefer our regular programming, please check out our streaming service at wyomingpublicmedia.org, which will carry the Wyoming Public Radio content via a special link. In addition, this may be the perfect opportunity to check out our Classical Wyoming, Jazz Wyoming, and Wyoming Sounds channels, available on radio in many locations and everywhere through streaming.

I leave you with a story that you may have missed. This one is about "spelt," and how UW research scientist Thomas Foulke brought this ancient grain back to life in Wyoming.

Thank you for your support and for listening on radio, online, on your smartphone, or wherever you may find us. Visit the WPM How to Listen Site.
